Introduction

Sex offender registration and notification systems have proliferated around the world over the last twenty years. Starting with the United States' first national-level sex offender registration law in 1994, 18 additional countries have since enacted sex offender registration laws. A handful of these systems are more akin to what we would consider to be a CHRI (criminal history record information) database as opposed to a 'registry', but are included in this overview for the sake of thoroughness.

The following countries have laws governing sex offender registration and notification systems at the national and/or provincial level, and are marked by a red tag, below: Argentina, Australia, Bermuda, Canada, France, Germany, Ireland (Republic of), Jamaica, Jersey, Kenya, Maldives, Malta, Pitcairn Islands, South Africa, South Korea, Taiwan, Trinidad & Tobago, United Kingdom, and the United States.

The following countries have considered or are considering sex offender registration and notification laws, but such laws have not yet passed, and are marked by a yellow tag, below: Austria, Bahamas, Fiji, Finland, Hong Kong, Israel, Malaysia, New Zealand, Switzerland, United Arab Emirates, and Zimbabwe.

None

Public Registry Website:

None

International Travel Notice Required:

No

Scope of Registerable Offenses:

Sexual Abuse of Minors, Forcible Sexual Abuse of any Person

Duration and Frequency of Registration:

Indefinite duty to update address

Discussion

Argentina passed its Sex Offenders Registry law in July of 2013. It is anticipated that, once operational, the registry will be tied to a national DNA database. Offenders are required to provide a residence address, keep it current, and also provide any national identification number. Registration information is to be used for law enforcement purposes only.

Australia

Federalized System

While each State or Territory maintains its own offenders' registry, there are policies in place to share that registration information across States and Territories, as well as with the Australian Government. The individual registration schemes are distinct and complex and the practitioner is encouraged to review the appropriate State or Territory's provisions.

Scope of Registerable Offenses:

Nearly all sexually-related offenses

Duration and Frequency of Registration:

Depends on the maximum term of imprisonment for the underlying offense. Ranges from 10 years to lifetime registration.

Discussion

Ontario was the first Canadian Province to enact a sex offender registration system, and did so in 2001. It operates in conjunction with, yet separate from, the National Sex Offender Registry. Each of the other Provinces has passed its own regulations in order to participate in the National Sex Offender Registry.

France

Sex Offender Registration Law Enacted:

2004

Public Notification System:

None

Public Registry Website:

None

International Travel Notice Required:

No

Scope of Registerable Offenses:

Serious sexual assaults, corruption of a minor under 15; certain other offenses may be registerable at the discretion of the court or prosecutor

Duration and Frequency of Registration:

10 years or 20 years depending on the severity of the offense; verification every 6 months or annually; address change must be declared within 15 days

Discussion

France enacted its registration law in 2004 and it went into force in 2005. There is no public disclosure of any kind for registration information. French Nationals who are convicted in foreign courts of offenses similar to registerable offenses in France also must register if they return to France. The 2009 landmark case of Gardel v. France discussed the French registration process in detail and held that it did not violate the European Convention on Human Rights.

Discussion

While Germany does not have a nationwide sex offender registration system, a number of its states have developed a “sex offender file” whose acronym is ‘HEADS’ in order to better track sex offenders after their release from prison and while they are on supervision in the community. The system appears to be in place in Bavaria (Bayern), Saxony (Sachsen), Brandenburg, and North Rhine-Westphalia (Nordrhein-Westfalen). Information gathered includes risk assessments, DNA, fingerprints, and conviction information.

Discussion

Jamaica passed its Act requiring sex offender registration in 2009, but only enacted regulations enabling such registration in 2012. Offenders must register within three days of conviction or release from custody. First time offenders, juvenile offenders, and others may be granted an exception to the registration requirements.

Discussion

Jersey is the largest of the Channel Islands between England and France. As an English-speaking Crown Dependence of Great Britain, Jersey has “a close affinity with the United Kingdom, but they have their own legislature and legal jurisdiction.” Although located just off the coast of Normandy, Jersey is not part of the European Union.

Scope of Registerable Offenses:

Unclear from Legislation; appears that it might apply to any sex offense

Duration and Frequency of Registration:

Life; offenders must notify the registrar if they change residence address, employment, or school enrollment; any changes to registration information are to be made in advance, if feasible

Discussion

Kenya enacted its sex offender registration law in 2006. In 2008, regulations were promulgated to implement the registry. Beginning in 2010, the Kenyan National Council for Law Reporting (NCLR) began independently compiling a register of convictions for sex offenses to be forwarded to the Registrar. The official registry database was unveiled in 2012.

Duration and Frequency of Registration:

Depending on severity of the offense of conviction, ranges from 2 years to lifetime registration; offenders must update information within 3 days of any changes

Discussion

The Pitcairn Islands are the least populous jurisdiction in the world, a British Overseas Territory with approximately 50 residents. Nevertheless, in response to some very public sexual assault trials in 2004, it has enacted a sex offender registration and notification program which mirrors, to a large extent, that of the United Kingdom.

No

Scope of Registerable Offenses:

Any sex offense against a child

Duration and Frequency of Registration:

Depending on severity of the offense of conviction, ranges from 5 years to lifetime registration; procedures to mandate regular updating of registration information have not been developed

Discussion

South Africa passed its legislation directing the establishment of a National Register for Sex Offenders (NRSO) in 2007. It became operational in 2009. It seems the primary use of the registry in South Africa is to enable employers and certain government officials to conduct checks; it does not appear to be designed for investigative use by police officials.

South Korea

Sex Offender Registration Law Enacted:

2000

Public Notification System:

Yes

Public Registry Website:

Yes; offenders are posted for 5 or 10 years depending on the sentence received for underlying offense

International Travel Notice Required:

No

Scope of Registerable Offenses:

Any sex offense against a child

Duration and Frequency of Registration:

Offenders are required to register for 20 years, must report any changes in registration information within 30 days, and police verify registration information annually.

Discussion

South Korea has a robust sex offender registration and notification system and also utilizes a public sex offender registry website, <http://www.sexoffender.go.kr>. Any person convicted of a sex offense is subject to targeted public notification and website posting. The length of time that an offender's information is made available on the website is tied to the length of incarceration received by the offender for the underlying offense.

United Kingdom

Sex Offender Registration Law Enacted:

1997

Public Notification System:

Varies

Public Registry Website:

None

International Travel Notice Required:

Yes

Scope of Registerable Offenses:

Nearly any sex offense

Duration and Frequency of Registration:

Ranges from two years to life, depending on the circumstances. Offenders must update their information within three days of any changes.

Discussion

The United Kingdom passed its initial national sex offender registration act in 1997. Qualifying offenders are required to provide certain registration information to local police officials and maintain that registration information in the event of any changes. Though in whole quite similar, there are differences in detail of the registration and notification laws applicable in England and Wales, Scotland, and Northern Ireland.

In addition to registration and notification as a result of a criminal conviction, there are also four civil orders available for the protection of the public in certain cases. They are briefly described on the following page.

United Kingdom

Countries that Maintain an Official Relationship with the U.K.

Certain countries maintain a special relationship with the U.K. and are known as either British Overseas Territories or Crown Dependencies. They are not considered part of the United Kingdom. Some of those countries have also created their own sex offender registry systems and the influence of legislation in the U.K. can be seen in their systems:

- Bermuda (British Overseas Territory)
- Jersey (British Overseas Territory)
- Pitcairn Islands (Crown Dependency)

National Disclosure Scheme Started in 2013

In 2013, a national disclosure scheme was finalized whereby any individual may apply to their local police officials to find out if any person is a registered sex offender.

www.gov.uk/find-out-if-a-person-has-a-record-for-child-sexual-offences

In addition to registration requirements, there are four Civil Orders which are available in the United Kingdom which can be pursued independent of an individual's registration responsibilities:

Foreign Travel Order (FTO)	Police may request for certain offenders if "their behavior as to give reasonable cause to believe" it necessary and if the court is satisfied it will protect children generally, or specifically from serious sexual harm from the offender outside the U.K. A Foreign Travel Order can prohibit international travel either generally or to specific countries for a period of up to five years, and may also require the offender to surrender passports.
Notification Order	Police may request to ensure that any person convicted of a sex offense outside the U.K. would have their name added to the register.
Risk of Sexual Harm Order (RSHO)	Any person may request if an adult is engaging in 'grooming' behavior with a minor; the Order can prevent any named activity in addition to placing the person on the register.
Sexual Offences Prevention Order (SOPO)	Police may request if a person has previously been convicted of a sex offense and the person acts in "such a way as to give reasonable cause to believe that it is necessary for such an order to be given."

United States

Sex Offender Registration Law Enacted:

1994 (Federal)

Public Notification System:

Yes

Public Registry Website:

Yes

International Travel Notice Required:

Yes

Scope of Registerable Offenses:

Most sex offenses

Duration and Frequency of Registration:

Varies depending on jurisdiction of conviction; at federal level, 15 years, 25 years or Life and annual, semi-annual or quarterly check-ins

Discussion

The first country to enact national sex offender registration legislation, the United States' registration and notification now consists of individual registries and public registry websites operated by all 50 States, the District of Columbia, four of the principal U.S. Territories, as well as over 70 federally-recognized Indian Tribes.

These jurisdiction-level systems are linked in a national public registry website, which is available to the public, and a more detailed law enforcement database. Both are administered through the United States Department of Justice.
